Sunday Reflection

What can we say about love?

Everything has been said so often. Love here, love there. He loves me, he loves me not. Love, love, love. You get kind of tired of the word love. And perhaps we get a little tired of the word love because we use it so carelessly. And the things that really aren't love, but a disguise for love or a pretense for love, are easy on the lips.

Today's Gospel should set the tone for your entire life. You have to love all your days in a married life and have to face all the problems that come with actual loving in marriage. It's quite different from just romancing and singing songs and dancing and thinking. But you don't want to be dismissive either. It's a sweet little word, love, when it's used in times that it can touch your heart. And it can bring you alive, take away your sadness, make you feel happy again.

Jesus, in today's Gospel, is asked the question. "What is the most important Commandment?" What they really meant by the Commandments was how He formed the community, and how that community was supposed to act, and how that community could take them from a raggedy bunch of slaves into a community that would last forever. Basically, it was them putting down on paper what it was to be loved by God and to love God with your whole heart and love your neighbor as yourself.

What does it mean to love your neighbor as yourself? What he's really saying, "Love your neighbor because your neighbor is yourself, and if you hate your neighbor you're hating yourself, and if you misuse your neighbor you're misusing yourself, and if you're going to war you're warring against your neighbor."

Because there's only one kind of love, the love of God. And there is no limitations, choices, in the use of the word love for one who says, "God loves me and I love." And we forget that there's no such thing as me just loving. Loving is a verb. It has an object: "I love this. I love that. I love you. I love him. I love God." It's His love. But we must receive it and say, "Yes, the love I love my mother, my father, my sisters, my brothers, friends, people, that love is God's love. The other stuff is what I might like, you know, or get along with."

But to love means to give your whole self, holding nothing back. If you're holding things back, you really don't know what love is yet. Love is a totality of surrender.
